RACING GOSSIP.

The word "outlaw" as applied to the owners jockeys and horses racing at St. Louis and the Maryland tracks is a blot on the book of American turf law. It should be wiped out as soon as possible. In pure English an "outlaw" is a person to be killed by any one on sight—a price to be paid by officialism for evidences of no existence. Such title is entirely out of line as applied to the St. Louis and Maryland racing brigades. They are made up of owners, jockeys and horses not able—by choice—to win their way on the Jockey Club and Turf Congress tracks. The owners are just doing the best they can with what they have. They have violated no law of the land in racing what they possess on the tracks upon which they elect to race. Corrupt practices are local offences and should be punished by local authorities. Racing abilitarianism suggests that the so-called "outlaws" are in their own places. They relieve the major turf. Why should they therefore be so villainously branded.

The racing of every land meets such irregulars. England regulates its own high class racing via the Jockey Club and leaves a season for irregulars, merely without recognition. So do other European racing clubs of control. No such verbal ugliness of nomenclature is applied to any class outside America. We run to extremes at all corners. The "outlaw" title of the American turf is one of our most extreme and hurried uglinesses. The sooner it is erased the better. The "outlaw" horses, owners and jockeys may and should be barred. That's mere regulation. So, however, should be the irregular track owners and bookmakers. Why are the mere sharp tools singled out? Mr. Merchant has no human right to dictate to Mr. Laborer the street in which he shall live. Neither has he the right to say how Mr. Laborer shall use his tools—provided the use is legal. Should Mr. Laborer use them against the peace and rules of society, the law of the land will attend to him. "Outlaw" is one of the bits of verbal carelessness with which American turf literature abounds. It cannot be wiped out too soon.

Thus far the attempt of the Anti-Gambling League to suppress sport in England have been far from successful, and Mr. John Hawke, the chairman, has received little encouragement in the legal actions and public steps which he has taken. One of the severest of set-backs received by him was that administered Thursday, Nov. 19, when the Alexandra Park case came up for a hearing before the Chairman of the Middlesex County Council Licensing Committee. Mr. Hawke hoped to prevent the issuing of a license to Alexandra Park, and in his address made many assertions which he was unable to substantiate by proofs. The members of the Anti-Gambling League has always posed as lovers of sport, though opposed to gambling; but their mask was thrown off upon this occasion, for Mr. Hawke admitted that the object of the League was: That as a race meeting could not be held without the accompanying evils of betting, and inasmuch as it was a part of their case that this demoralization was spreading widely over the country, that it was the duty of every public man to do what he could to prevent it. The real desire of the Anti-Gambling League, as admitted by Mr. Hawke, is to put a stop to racing, and, as a natural sequence, to every other sport on which there is any betting. Now that the true purpose of the League has been disclosed, the friends of sport will know how to meet it. A serious falling off in the funds of the Anti-Gambling League will naturally follow the admission of its chairman.

The Sporting League, which has been largely instrumental in frustrating the plans of the Anti-Gambling League, is determined to wage an active warfare against the latter body. Its plan and structure appeal to American sportsmen of all the higher grades.

Kenston, more than a fair judge, says in the Spirit: Prince Lief has furnished into a great, powerful horse. The trouble with him was a slightly bowed tendon, which is hardly noticeable, so that his chances of training next year are good. Mr. McClelland does not intend to hurry him at all, consequently he will not be seen in any of the big events in the east before the Fall meetings, which his owner intends to patronize should his string prove good enough to warrant it.

The coming three-year-olds of the McClelland string are The Planter, Maceo and Our Hope. The yearlings are mostly home bred and sired by Bermuda. They are of good size and are likely lookers. The filly out of Sallie McClelland is a lengthy rakish sort. The Order—Miss Saxon colt is also in the string. Mr. McClelland getting him at $2,500 in the Easton sale. He was said to be highly tried, a half mile in 5:50. He is a medium sized colt of fair substance and is a gamey, sturdy looking customer, but lacks the quality generally seen in a high class one. Still his present owner makes few mistakes, and in his hands he is likely to pay his way.
